Courses offered

Our college offers Nationally Recognised Training in Remedial Massage and Shiatsu.

Training options include Nationally Recognised Training in Shiatsu, Nationally Recognised Training in Remedial Massage, Training in Animal Acupuncture and Shiatsu. Dry Needling and Facial Rejuvenation courses are also available at regular intervals through the year.(please refer to relevant pages on the website for more details).

We are also a CRICOS accredited training centre [Provider #03861H] offering overseas students the opportunity to study Shiatsu and Remedial Massage to the very high national standards.

Our focus is on individual training in a mentor style of tuition, with class sizes kept small so that individual attention is assured. We take great pride in our very high level of graduates' success in continuing on into their chosen vocation of complementary medicine.

We also focus on the students' health and well-being. Each training day starts with a yoga session or Qi-Gong to improve and maintain vitality and optimum health.

All courses are designed to equip the graduate with the skills necessary to be a well rounded health professional. Training includes a strong focus on self-development and awareness and compassion for others. These attributes are fundamental components of a good practitioner.

Diploma of Remedial Massage HLT52015

This Nationally Recognised Diploma level course is designed to make your career as a professional Massage Therapist as successful and sustainable as possible. The course embraces a good grounding in Western Massage techniques and theory, as well as a variety of Eastern Massage approaches.

Graduates enjoy the ability to offer a wider variety of techniques to their patients to achieve the best result. Many of the Eastern massage techniques (such as the use of Trigger Points) offer a less strenuous, more sustainable and more effective way to physically treat people. People have benefited from different massage skills for thousands of years and these methods can easily be incorporated within a massage treatment. Working smarter for a better patient outcome leads to a long-term successful career as a Massage Therapist. Aspects of training include massage and nutrition for athletes, use of osteopathic techniques in releasing chronic structural imbalances, Cupping and Trigger Point therapy.

Training is offered in either a 12 month full time program or an 18 month part time program

Diploma of Shiatsu and Oriental Therapies HLT52215

Our Training program is very comprehensive as it includes many styles of Shiatsu that have developed over the years.

Students are instructed in many techniques of diagnosis and therapy unique to Shiatsu.

A strong focus on self development is a key philosophy of this training. This includes Yoga and Qi Gong. The preparation of foods for particular times of the year and for different health conditions is included in this training.

Shiatsu has amalgamated Japanese and Chinese medicine techniques and philosophies.

The course includes a thorough investigation of Traditional Japanese and Chinese Medicine theory to enhance the ability to accurately diagnose and therefore treat many health issues that plague the world today.

Training in Animal Acupuncture and Massage will be offered as an online course with optional attendances to one week seminars held twice a year.

Unit 1 Oriental Medicine Theory

Mode of delivery-Home study

This unit gives you the background knowledge of Traditional Chinese Medicine (TCM), including the Yin Yang, Five Element Theory and the Functions of the organs from a TCM perspective.

Unit 2 Meridian Theory and Point Location

The body's energy pathways known as Meridians or Channels travel across the body as well as through the internal organs.

Having an understanding of the location and functions of the channels and the associated acupuncture points is essential to be able to competently practice acupuncture.

Unit 3 Animal Shiatsu

Animal Shiatsu is the application of a Japanese style of acupressure treatment to Meridians on the body. Because of this Shiatsu can not only treat Musculoskeletal issues but also organ imbalances.

Furthermore ,Shiatsu is a great way to prepare the animal for needling and in some cases may be your only option if the animal is needle shy.

Unit 4 Differential Diagnosis

Accurate diagnosis is essential in determining the best points and point combinations when treating animals. This unit details the differentiating patterns of disease in the organs and outlines the best treatment method and point selections for each individual disorder.

Unit 5 Anatomy and Physiology

An understanding of the anatomy and physiology of mammals is a requirement for a thorough understanding of the processes and limitations of acupuncture and massage applications to animals.

We recommend the Online course offered by ACS see the link below for details.

<https://www.acs.edu.au/courses/animal-anatomy-and-physiology-animal-husbandry-i--164.aspx>

Unit 6 Animal Acupuncture 1

This unit incorporates The Animal Dry Needling course as well as the inclusion of location and function of the Back Associated Points and The 5 Transporting Points which are located on each of the Twelve Meridians.

Unit 7 Animal Acupuncture 2

This unit discusses the Eight Extraordinary Vessels in detail.The other components of this unit include the use of specific point combinations for both acute Musculoskeletal issues via the study of the Tendino-muscular Meridians.Furthermore we will study the Distinct Meridians which involves the Collateral Channels that have a powerful affect on the individual organs, otherwise unreachable via the acupuncture points on the Meridians.

Unit 8 Animal Acupuncture 3

The final unit of Acupuncture training involves the study of Five Element Acupuncture known also as the Four Needle technique, which restores the balance between up to three organ systems, by using only four acupuncture points specific to the presenting condition.We will also be studying the use of electro acupuncture machines including how they work and when it is appropriate to include in a treatment plan.In the final section we will discuss the use of lasers, the precautions and applications

Unit 9 Practice Management

This unit is for those that have not previously had any experience in opening and managing a business.It will give you the tools required to market and manage your business including goal setting, advertising strategies and legal responsibilities.

Unit 10 Student Supervised Clinic

Students have the option to either attend a one week Supervised Clinic or have a series of Online training segments where they will demonstrate their ability to diagnose and treat different animals that they will provide with varied medical issues.
